Anna Becker thought her life was perfect. At twenty-three, she lives in an apartment with her boyfriend while balancing a part-time job and her studies—nothing to darken her happiness.

Until the day the tide turns.

After being heartbroken by Arthur's betrayal, Anna discovers that she has a rare and unrecognized disease. She's suddenly admitted to SORI, a specialized institute, to receive special treatment.

But, this institute isn't what it seems, and the treatment reveals side effects that she would never have thought possible.
